This week's VoteTopic:

For Safer Internet Day 2021, we got you thinking about your digital footprint, and how different online threats could make use of this information if it is not properly protected. Here's your response to the question:

Do we take cyber security for granted?

"I do not think so. We tend to have a lot of education on cyber security so I think we can understand fully about all the different skills needed."

"We have weak passwords, we fall for internet scams, and we could have antivirus protectors but we don't ... because we take cyber security for granted."

This week we have worked closely with the Counter Terrorism Police on a topic surrounding the potential dangers of online platforms, particularly during lockdown. We will be getting you to share your thoughts and experiences while discussing:

Has lockdown made online platforms more dangerous?

Discussion points:

- Have you ever seen anything on an online platform that has made you worried? If so, what did you do?
- Do you feel confident about who to talk to if something you see online affects your feelings or thoughts?
- What could online platforms do to tackle posts or users who spread inappropriate information or ideas?

Student research points:

- Find out the key signs to look out for in someone who is at risk of becoming radicalised.
- Explore the effects lockdown has had on our mental and emotional health and what is being done to combat this.
- Make a list of the online platforms that you think are doing the right thing to tackle the issues explored today.
